SCULPTURE
ART 359

Fall 2021
Tuesday + Thursday 9:00 - 11:45 am
Professor: Jose Ferreira
Prerequisites: ART 116 + 176

This course is designed for students who would like to experiment with different media, think critically, and articulate their ideas, processes, and intentions. Students are required to fabricate different projects during the semester that explore the notion of sculpture broadly, to extricate a definition of their work that has social and political significance. Contemporary Sculpture students that may be gravitating toward certain aesthetics, working processes and historical alignments are tasked with setting personal goals for research and art production. In addition, students develop greater ability in articulating and investigating the significance of their own work and the work of other artists.
