

Residency Code and Description

Residency code refers to the residency classification of a student as it is applied to tuition payments. Students are charged one of three general types of tuition: Resident, 150% Resident, or Non-Resident. Under certain conditions, non-residents may be allowed to pay resident tuition or 150% resident tuition. These non-resident categories (E, F, G, H, I, J, M, P, T, V, W, and Z) are used for reporting purposes and should only be used for non-resident students. Residents should always be categorized as a Resident for residency purposes even if they meet the conditions for one or more Non-Resident tuition categories (e.g. N/R Hawaiian Exemption, N/R Veteran/Dependent Exemption).
