

All are welcome for a presentation of:

BEYOND COLLECTIVE ACTION PROBLEMS

A new book on perceived fairness and sustained cooperation in farmer managed irrigation systems in Nepal.

Why do some groups successfully sustain cooperation to use and maintain shared resources while others don't? In this book, Atul Pokharel argues that the answer may come from understanding how communities address the fairness problem, a type of problem that lies beyond the well known collective action problems but has received much less attention.

 February 12, 2025 4:00 PM  ARCH 205

Limited Copies Will Be Available for Purchase or Order Yours Here:

Presented by:

ATUL POKHAREL, PHD

Atul Pokharel holds a Ph.D. from MIT in Urban Planning, and is currently a Doctoral Student in the Department of Computer Science at Yale University where he develops technologies to help make computer networks more sustainable. Prior to joining Yale, he was an Assistant Professor of Urban Planning at New York University. He received his A.B. from Princeton University, where he majored in Mathematics.